MISCELLANEOUS.

BISHOP WHITAKER'S

SCHOOL FOR GIRLS, RENO.

This School has been in successful operation for three years and a half and has become well known through out the State. From the time it was first opened until now no pains have been spared on the part of those who have it in charge to make it a

FIRST-CLASS SCHOOL,

Fully worthy the confidence of those who have daughters to be educated And these efforts have been successful It gives us pleasure to say that although the number of scholars has at some time been larger than during the last term, the School is now in better condition than it has ever before been and it is now more than ever before, worthy of patronage and support.

TEACHERS:

Miss Kate A. Sill the first Principal returned and resumed her position at the beginning of the last term, to the great satisfaction of every scholar, and friend of the School. Mrs. L. B. Graham has also returned, and with Miss Sill will hereafter be identified with the School. Miss Eva Quaife, the teacher of music is too well and favorably known to need any commendation from us In addition to these the Misses Denver, Miss Julia S. Woodruff, and Miss Jane Briscoe, three thoroughly competent teachers have been employed during the past term Addition to the staff of teachers will be made whenever the wants of the School may require it, but with thirty-five scholars, the number in attendance during the last term, six teachers are amply sufficient to do full justice to every scholar While especial attention is given to the Common English Studies.

And to the health and good manners of scholars, there is not wanting every facility needed for acquiring all the accomplishments of a Higher Education.

One admirable feature of the School is that lessons in Free Hand Drawing, Singing and Penmanship are given regularly to all the pupils without extra charge Calisthenics and Physical Training also receive due attention But the best feature of the School is that it is a

Refined. Cultivated. Christian Home

It is in the formation of a pure womanly character in its pupils that its best and most enduring influence is to be found. There are few who have been long connected with the School who do not show the effect of this influence upon their character and habits The charges are as low as they can reasonably be placed.

$300 a Year

Pays for Board and Tuition in all the English studies Books and Washing are charged at the actual cost An additional charge is made for private lessons in Music, Drawing or Modern Languages

The Next Term begins on Thursday, January 8, 1880.

Letters of inquiry and applications for admission should be made to

MISS KATE A. SILL, Reno, Nevada

E. C. POWNING, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 26, 1880.

The Democratic party still maintain their defensive and timid attitude in national politics. Their National Committee has just called their National Convention at Cincinnati two weeks following the Republican Convention. Most politicians think that this means that they propose to take advantage of any error or weakness the Republicans may commit at Chicago. I have talked with some Democrats, who say that should

GRANT BE NOMINATED

At Chicago they will put up Hancock and an Ohio man on the ticket, thereby claiming to be able to carry both Pennsylvania and Ohio, because of the dissatisfaction among Republicans with the Cameron-Grant management and opposition to the third term. However, should Grant be withdrawn, they will have to change this programme and revise their calculation, and since the strong showing of Senator Blaine where the General was supposed to have everything his own way, renders his withdrawal not improbable His best friends say that he will not take the nomination unless it is made unanimous on the first ballot which is impossible now. As the light is being let in on the scheme by which the Democrats

HOPED TO STEAL

The seat of Washburn of Minnesota, they begin to quail before the indignation which such an act arouses in advance. It would be as bad as the late Maine steal, and I don't believe even the Democrats dare to commit it pending a national campaign. "General" Boynton, who recently made charges against General Sherman, has

BEEN SNUBBED

At headquarters. The President declines to order a Court Martial, and intimates that Boynton can find a means of redress in the Courts. Mr Hayes fully understands this matter and don't intend to Court Martial any officer for charges made against such a man as Boynton. It would be difficult to make a charge that would not hit him somewhere. The dispatches from

INDIANA

Say that of the 30 delegates who were elected in that State yesterday, 24 are for Blaine. The ten delegates from Vermont are for Senator Edmunds first and Blaine afterwards. Speaker Randall still keeps saying that Congress can adjourn in May easily, and yet he and his friends throw all sorts of

OBSTACLES

In the way of public business, showing that they do not really mean what they say. They are hoping all the time for opportunities for mischief, but all the time they are preparing huge blunders to kill themselves with. LOGAN.

The following is the manner in which the Vermont Republicans present Edmunds:

Resolved, That the Republicans of Vermont present to the Republicans of the country George F. Edmunds as a suitable person to be made a candidate of the Republican party for next President. We do this, not wholly of chiefly from our State pride in a man whose public service has been so honorable to the people whom he has represented, but because his pure life, his eminent ability, his valuable public service and his unflinching Republicanism have marked him by a higher title than the accident of birthplace or residence as a person fit to be President of the United States Himself a representative of what the Republican party ought to hold as its most precious possession —an unswerving fidelity to the principles upon which the party was built and has won its great reputation, and of the intellectual power and moral sense and courage through which alone it can preserve what it has so worthily achieved —his candidacy would be of itself a declaration of principles and the sign of success.

THE LUMBER TRADE

[Truckee Republican]

Never since the completion of the Central Pacific has the outlook for Truckee lumbermen been more favorable than at present. Almost all the mills on the river have already found markets for their Summer's work Several have contracts for every foot of lumber they can saw between now and next Autumn's snow fall. At Tahoe the mammoth mills of Bliss, Yerington & Co. are usually well supplied with logs for Spring sawing, but it is a notable fact that they have no stock of logs on hand this year. Before they can start up, loggers must get into the woods, cut logs, haul them to Glenbrook. The Truckee mills have an ample supply of logs on hand, and sawing will begin with the first fair weather The Truckee trade will therefore have a new and splendid market for a few weeks in Virginia and Carson. The new railroads of Nevada, the rapid development of several mining districts, and the activity of the Salt Lake lumber trade, all present harvest fields for our mill men.

The Marysville City election will be held on Monday the 15th instant.

CONKLING'S SPEECH.

The New York Herald of February 25th has just come to hand, containing a full account of the proceedings of the New York Republican Convention. It reports Senator Conkling's speech as follows:

MR. PRESIDENT—I would, now and always, when honored with a seat in a Republican convention, that I might cast a vote on every question agreeing with every other member of the Convention. I would hardly hope, in any case, that I might cast a vote satisfactory to those who attend in the galleries of conventions and attending as outsiders of conventions — sometimes to impress upon the members the idea that the convictions expressed by clamor and applause are the convictions of Republican constituents. But, Mr. President, I cannot vote with the gentlemen from Westchester and New York. I cannot vote with any man who proposes now to fritter away and squander, in the presence of a great emergency, the imperial and overtopping influence of the great State of New York. The election before us, fellow Republicans, is destined to be memorable when you and I may be forgotten—memorable for the desperation of the contest—not only before the people have decided it, but I fear afterwards also. It is the last election to occur under a census which gives unhallowed and unlawful power to the South. I say undue and unlawful power, because every colored person is counted to swell representation, and yet the colored vote is trampled out and ignored. (Applause.) This arrangement gives to the Southern States but forty-seven electoral votes less than a majority. A new count is about to take place, a new apportionment is to be made—fairly made.

A NEW APPORTIONMENT.

The sceptre will be taken away from the States lately in rebellion, and will pass to the North and to the West. But with a Democratic President next time and a Democratic Congress to make all these adjustments you will have an apportionment under which the Republican party may not carry this country again for ten or twenty years. Moreover, a close result, however clear, may lead to a disputed electoral count and open the door to a train of evils which no prophet can foretell. The last electoral count, when one House was Republican and one Democratic, the extra session, with its revolutionary plot; the doings in Maine and other things, are enough to warn the blind and the deaf. Preparations are already on foot to place the choice of the next President into the hands of a Democratic House. A flaw found in a single electoral certificate of any State with either of these two Democratic houses to refuse to count it, and the result is given into the hands of the House of Representatives, where the election must be made by States, and what do you see? Although the House is Democratic, counted by States it is Republican.

THE NEED OF THE HOUR.

The Senator then referred at length to the great importance of the coming election and the part that New York, the pivotal State, was destined to play in it. He spoke of the duties of delegates as agents of the people whom they represented, and then went on to say:

My honorable friend from Cayuga, Senator Woodin, nods assent, and I expected to hear from him, as I did with pleasure, that if he accepted the commission of a convention which had indicated what he should do, he would never violate that understanding. Not he (Applause.) And, Mr. President, let me say frankly for myself that if any man, however much I may respect him, were presented to this Convention who would declare or who would prove recreant to its judgment, let alone its instructions, I would never vote for him as a delegate to any convention. (Applause.) If then, we are here to express to Republicans in other States who are longing to know the judgment of the Republicans of New York—if we are here to express to them our opinion in this emergency, and if delegates are to go to represent, not their own wills, but the will and judgment of those behind them, what is the objection, what would be the cowardice of manfully saying what we believe? Next year we will need two things. I mean when we come to count the electoral vote we shall need two things; first, a decided, unmistakable result, and second, a man with the country behind him, a man in whom this whole country has so much confidence that no revolutionary plot or conspiracy will uplift its hand to strike down his election. (Applause.) Now, Mr. President, in the name of the history of the last fifteen years of war and peace, looking over all of those tragic events transpiring while the country has been rocked as in the throes of a political earthquake, who is there—I ask every member of this Convention to lay his hand on his heart and answer—who is there in this broad land upon whose name, upon whose achievements, upon whose character and strength the Republican party and the nation more than upon any other can safely repose If there is such a man I will fall short of the duty assigned to me by the seat which my constituents have honored me, every other member of this convention will fall short in his duty, if we do not express our judgment and our convictions accordingly.

The speaker then went on to speak of the past events of the party and how history repeated itself. He spoke of the renomination of Abraham Lincoln and the bitter denunciation that politicians gave it The Senator thought that it was an easy matter to make delegates of any shade. The delegate might threaten to bolt, but nothing could stifle the real voice of the district he represented. "The shadows murmur while the deeps are dumb," said the speaker.

Mr. President, he continued, down below this fluttering surface, deep down in the hearts and judgments of this people—broader, deeper, stronger than any words of mine, and, if I may say it without offence, than of any other member of this convention, is the conscience, the judgment, the conviction of the masses of Republicans of New York and of other States. What is the judgment of the Republicans of New York as to the one single question before this Convention—namely, to whose hands can we commit most safely that banner so resplendent with illustrious achievements? What is the judgment, I say, of the Republicans of New York? Does any man hear me who doubts; does not this Convention overwhelmingly answer that question? Do we not know that the judgment and conviction of our constituents is that the safest man among all the eminent men of the Republican party, the safest man, first, as a candidate in the election, and, second, afterward to be lawfully, peacefully and quietly seated, is that man who carried the flag through the storm of battle and who, having been tested and weighed, has been found worthy of the confidence and admiration of the American people. No third term objection to him.

OBJECTION TO A THIRD TERM.

The objection to a third term is that the occupant of the Presidency may wield his official power to renominate and elect himself. This man is a private citizen, he has no official patronage or power, he has been absent in distant lands, not able to exercise his individual influence upon men. The official patronage, let me say—and I speak in the hearing of men who know it—the official patronage of the nation has not been used for him. (Laughter.) No, Mr. President friendship for the ex-President is past and has not been for more than three years, a passport to official favor, therefore no man can suppose that the desire of employing official influence appears in a case like this; there is nothing in it The statutes of our State forbid in all the sixty counties of the State the election of a Sheriff. Why? For fear that, holding in his hands the instrumentalities of the Sheriff, he may wield them for oppression in order to re-elect himself, but was it ever that when a man who has been Sheriff had been out of office for a term of years that you might not renominate and re-elect him? In this blessed county of Oneida, which we who live here regard—I beg pardon of my friends—as the most enlightened and correct spot on earth—(laughter)—in this county of Oneida a man who has been Sheriff before has, more than once, after another term had intervened, been renominated and re-elected, and nobody ever thought of an objection to him, although there is a lunatic asylum in this district that has 700 citizens, and with all those advantages and opportunities no man was ever heard or heard of that supposed that the rule or the reason of it applied to such a case. But, Mr. President, I do not want to seem blessed with the gift of continuing. I am glad to know that some others have it (laughter) and therefore I believe there is a man who more certainly than any other can win in this next election.

THE MAN WHO CAN WIN.

I believe he can poll a larger vote in the State of New York than another man whose name I can spell. I believe more Republicans are for him than for any other Republican, and I believe that more Democrats will vote for him than will vote for any other Republican. I believe that if any name, if that of any man, can break into the solid phalanx of the South and carry either Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama or Florida—every one of which is a Republican State as much as is Massachusetts—(applause)—I believe if there be one man, the lustre and glory of whose name, the power of whose position, commands the confidence, not only of white men, but of those who were painted black by Nature's brush, and who had the loyalty and faith to cling to the flag in the dark hour, work for it, fight for it and pray for it; if there be any man on this footstool whom the whites and the blacks at the South cherish in their hearts, that man is the ex-President. (Applause.) Mr. President, this emergency is greater than any man, and rises far above the ambition and wishes or even the fate of any individual. It is not to honor him, but it is because I believe that the country and the party need him. (Applause.) Neither he nor any other man who owes allegiance to this nation has the right to refuse the use of his name at a time like this. It is because of the need of that name and not because of the want of others whom I would gladly see honored that I give my voice and my vote in favor of selecting him as the man in whom we believe, looking to the masses in the election and looking to safety and peace afterward. I have indicated, at more length than was necessary, that I shall vote gladly for every word of the report made to this Convention unanimously by the committee appointed for that purpose. I shall vote against all amendments I shall vote for the resolution calling upon the delegation to exert themselves earnestly and unitedly to carry out the judgment of the Convention. I shall do that believing that no man will accept a commission for this Convention meaning to trample upon the commission. I shall vote for it because I would not see the Empire State lost utterly in her influence in the National Convention. Why, think of it a moment, fellow Republicans. The election depends upon New York. She is to vote as a State, and her vote is to be so counted. She has the right, and it will be conceded to her to exert a most controlling influence on the election of a candidate. But suppose she goes there with her seventy votes, more than any State will or can cast in the Convention? Every man is a law unto himself, like a regiment or a company going into battle. In place of all bring together every man fires when he pleases and where he pleases—(laughter)—and the members of this delegation, thus divided, neutralize and offset each other. How proud we should feel if, on the roll-call coming down to the letter "N," New York is called, and some of her delegates vote for one man and some for another; and when the count comes to be announced, if they virtually neutralized each other and left the roll-call where it was before, and then comes in little patriotic New Hampshire—where they don't have so many pangs and fears as some of us have; where they will go with a united delegation, knowing that unity is strength; going as a band of brothers to carry out the wishes of her people—in comes little New Hampshire and casts her ten votes and she determines the ballot. Would not the Republicans of the Empire State feel proud in the presence of such an event? (A voice, "Hardly ever!") No, never. (Laughter). No, Mr. President. At an inclement season of the year the Republican party has sent up here her gravest, her wisest and her best. We know the overwhelming judgment of the Republicans of this State. Let us state it honestly and fairly, and if any man is put upon the delegation to go to Chicago who, despite the action of this Convention which gives him his commission, can justify or excuse himself in turning his back upon it and seeking to defeat the object for which he is sent, let that delegate answer to himself and to those to whom he deems himself amenable. All that we can do is to express, as Republican and Democratic conventions alike have done from time immemorial, the judgment, as we believe it to be, of those who constituted us and to whom we are answerable.

PEOPLE'S STORE!

IN PRESENTING THE ABOVE NAME TO the people of this city and adjacent counties, we desire to explain fully the motives and objects of our business; the manner and style in which we intend doing business, and why it is to the interest of the public to support the views we take

Our business transactions will all be based on the

STRICT CASH PAYMENT PLAN.

By this we mean that purchases must be accompanied by Cash, and

UNDER NO CIRCUMSTANCES

WILL ANY GOODS BE CHARGED.

Our motives for thus doing might, if not explained, seem exacting, but one moment—and we shall ask you, "How do you expect to buy at low rates and pay for the following extras—which, mind you must and is always added to the goods you buy?"

The following items we save, not for ourselves, but for the patrons of our house

First—We save the cost of a Book-keeper and Collector

Second—By avoiding the losses occasioned by non paying customers.

Third—By saving the interest at 1 per cent per month on $8,000, invested in book accounts

Fourth—By saving any omissions in charging for goods that would be sold on credit.

Fifth—By always having the cash in the drawer for the goods on the shelf, thereby saving the expense of paying for goods before the book accounts could be collected.

Sixth—And most important, by the reduction in prices of goods we buy, for where we have the ready cash to pay down for any article we desire, we can always buy goods at a reduced price, and yet have as much profit, for when buying on time, and paying in three or four months thereafter, a merchant certainly pays a higher price for his goods than one who has the ready cash to pay immediately And it evidently allows, and is an indisputable fact, that any house doing a credit business cannot sell at as low a price of one doing a

Strict Cash Business.

These theories demonstrate and convince Scepticism itself, and are as solid as an ocean rock.

Many an experienced eye will scan these lines, knowing full well these living truths, which cannot be disputed

It is our intention to place the different lines of merchandise we carry within the reach of legitimate traders, and at such

GREAT REDUCTION

That our patrons not alone will cling to us, but, with encouraging applause will urge us onward to inaugurate the system of

SOLID CASH,

WHICH IS THE ONLY LEVER TO SUCCESSFUL MERCHANDISING.
